PARKING INSIDER

Chief Executive's Message

I have just received our membership renewal for an association that Parking Australia belongs to that is basically an Association for Associations(yes there is an association for almost everything!). It made me think about the benefits that we receive from that organisation and how often we really use their services. You know, I don't contact them every week, or even read all of the email news they send me. However I do know that they are the "go to" organisation for times when I need answers about our Constitution, they share articles about the future of associations and I know they have the interests of Parking Australia at their core. For me its an insurance of sorts. However as I received their invoice I took some time to have a look at their website and explore the full suite of member offerings - and I learnt a whole lot. My request

INSIGHT FORUM PRESENTATIONS

If you were unable to make it to the recent Sydney Insight Forum on customer experience, then you'll be pleased to learn that presentations from GoGet, Q-Free and Adelaide City Council are now available to download.

JOIN NOW

Membership with the association includes access to online resources such as podcasts, presentations, and the e-library. Join today to start accessing benefits and our website and the member benefits as I expect you will be surprised if not reminded of the library of information, PODCASTS, presentations, case studies and articles, but the fact that we offer unlimited number of subscriptions for a member organisation and provide business and personal benefits such as health insurance discounts, well being programs, workplace relations advice and hotel discounts. For members this month either via your QR code or log in you can access the results from research we conducted on the key issues that keep you awake at night as well as exclusive access to presentations from GoGet, Sydney Airport, Adelaide Council and QFree. For a coffee break why not listen to author and urban transport planner Rachel Smith via our PODCAST service. Oh and by the way... I did renew our membership, certainly more informed and knowing that I was supporting an industry that directly represented us.

What will we do when everything is automated?

The U.S. Bureau of Labor projects that by 2024 the U.S. economy will need 50% fewer people installing and repairing electronics in cars, 42% fewer telephone operators, 26% fewer postal clerks, and 20% fewer parking enforcement officers. Or, to put it another way, cars will be better at self-repair, call routing technology will get better at conducting verbal conversations with humans, self-service postal machines will get better at taking care of human transactions in the post office, and parking meters will know how to write tickets. Australia needs stricter rules to curb air pollution

Have you ever left your car running as you wait for a passenger to return from a quick errand? It's called idling, and while it may feel easier than switching it off and on again, it wastes money and fuel, and dumps pollutants into the air. Vehicle emissions are a very significant contributor to air pollution, which causes health problems. Read more....

Call for presentations - Outlook 2017

QUICK LINKS

A partnership between Parking Australia and Physio-Control to promote the use of AEDs (Automated External Defibrillators) in car parks, has funded a $1000 donation to Safer Australian Roads and Highways (SARAH). Guy Leech, official ambassador for Physio-Control, presented the cheque to SARAH's President, Peter Frazer at the recent networking event. Read more...

Casino's car park hits the jackpot

The premier entertainment destination located in Darling Harbour wanted to revitalise its parking facility as well as extend the luxurious atmosphere of its private Sovereign Room, which is reserved for the casino's high rollers.

85,000m² of Flowcrete Australia's specialist deck coating systems were installed across the five-storey car parking facility to achieve a floor that would provide the desired aesthetics as well as the necessary functionality and durability. Read more...

The biggest challenges facing the parking industry

During the final quarter of 2016 Parking Australia undertook an industry poll to determine the biggest challenges currently facing the parking industry. This month we bring you the results from the poll and outline the top 3 concerns for respondents.
