CEO's Message

Based on the delegate feedback, our second OUTLOOK conference was a huge success. We were well up on both delegate and exhibitor numbers from 2015 and this has certainly given the organising committee something to consider as we commence our planning of PACE 18. The Parking Industry Awards saw a record number of entries and just under $6000 raised in about 5 minutes for our charity of choice SARAH. The delegate sessions proved to be a forum for information sharing with popular topics such as smart cities, car ownership, electric vehicles, and planning for the future of on street parking - being well attended. A shark tank session saw the idea of selling on street parking as a business highly debated between the panel of sharks. The tech talk breakfast provided a fantastic overview of suppliers' current and future plans.

Upgraded parking solutions for City of Ryde

A growing region like the City of Ryde needs infrastructure systems to match that growth. To manage the public space efficiently, Councils need forward thinking solutions, from parks management to managing parking. For Ryde Council in metropolitan Sydney, this means staying on top of parking demands in the Macquarie Park corridor - an area expected to double in both floor space and working

Stuck in traffic: we need a smarter approach to congestion

Traffic congestion costs us billions of dollars each year - so we are told - and population growth is not letting up. When road rage meets large economic costs, it's little wonder our politicians are desperate to do something. The trouble is, too often that "something" is a great big new freeway. Building more roads isn't the best answer, because the roads we have are mostly up to the job - if only we could make better use of them by spreading traffic out beyond the morning and evening peaks. Read more...

Why ticketless parking matters

To many parking customers, the term 'cashless parking' is often associated with mobile phone payment options that are heavily discredited by the media for being inconvenient. But despite this, parking operators across the globe are quietly and quickly embracing cashless parking solutions. Read more...

How can you improve your customers parking experience?

As the first touchpoint with your business, it is essential to eliminate the frustration that often accompanies finding a parking space. Research by Columbia Business School has proven that a relaxed and happy customer is willing to spend more money and more likely to become a repeat customer. Read more...

Smarter Parking for Sydney's iconic Bondi Beach

Waverley is the most densely populated local authority area in Australia, and has correspondingly high levels of car ownership. Factor in the year-round popularity of one of New South Wales' most iconic tourist destinations, and it's easy to see why the Council's Parking Services Division places a high priority on fair, accurate and consistent management of access to car parking.

Queensland regulates taxis and ridesharing services

Comprehensive changes to the personalised transport industry came into effect on 1 October in Queensland, including a new chain of responsibility framework, more stringent safety requirements and an updated licensing framework. Minister for Main Roads, Road Safety and Ports Mark Bailey said the changes were a key milestone in Stage 2 of the Queensland Government's reforms to the industry. Read more...

Parking & Traffic Consultants rebrands to ptc.

Parking & Traffic Consultants have announced a rebrand and new look under the name of 'ptc.' With a new string in their bow through the addition of communication design, ptc. have expanded their existing services of parking, traffic and civil engineering."By extending our involvement from the car park into other parts of the built environment, we can now comfortably say that the 'customer experience'
